I guess that was not very much like business, and I don't know what Mr. McLane wanted to know all that for. Then he looked at me again, and I guess he wasn't going to let me have the money, when a gentleman at the other desk came up to where I was sitting on a chair, and Mr. McLane said, "Well, Flood, what do you think of this young merchant?" And then I knew it was surprised when I poured out the great big gold twenty-dollar pieces on the counter? When we sent for ma and Maud, grandpa gave ma the money to come, and so we didn't have to borrow any more; and we took a nice cottage, not very near the store, for pa didn't want ma to know about Jones & Co., though I was just crazy to tell her. For several days we fooled her. She thought pa had a store down town, and I was going to school. I told lots of fibs about being detained at school, going down town, and all sorts of stories to account for being home late.

One day who should I see coming into the store but ma. "Have you any pearl shirt-buttons, little girl?" said ma.

"Yes, ma'am," said I, looking her right square in the face. "Goodness gracious!" said ma. that you, Vevic. I said: "Beg pardon, ma'am, what did me, and then laughed and said : "Oh, I beg your pardon, little girl; you look so much like my daughter Genevieve that I thought you was her. Then I heard pa snicker down behind the counter. He had seen me come in, and hid. Just as soon as ma went out pa jumped up and laughed, and said, "Snatch off your apron and cap, Vevie, and run round the block and get home before your mother." I did, and when ma got home she was the most surprised woman you ever seen. We knew this thing couldn't last, and so that night we told ma all about the house of "Jones & Co.," and ma kissed pa and said he was a "splendid, noble fellow, and just as good as gold," and that she "never was so proud of him in her life," and fell to kissing him and to crying and taking on. I never saw ma act so foolish in all her life, and pa said she "was making love to him over again."

Well, now, the story is about over. Ma came down to the store to help. At first she looked kinder sheepish, especially when some lady came in that she had known at The committee retired, and brought in be following: which were unanimously more than a thousand dollars apiece.
